

ISSUE NUMBER SEVENTY-FIVE • September 12, 2016

This coming weekend marks 229 years since our Founding Fathers gathered to sign the most influential document in our nation's history - our Constitution. It's amazing to think a single document continues to be the primary guide for our great country. While we have amended it, the vision for our country as laid out by the founding fathers still stands.

This Constitution Day, as we celebrate the liberties this document gives us, we must also recognize there has never been a greater threat to those freedoms than today. Rule of law is under attack, and separation of powers don't seem so separate anymore as the branches grow askew. Our founders desired a republic that was self-governing and put the framework in place to ensure a balance of power. It's up to us to carry on that legacy. To do so, citizens must stand up to protect and defend our liberties, as they did in our nation's founding.

This Thursday, I will be hosting town hall-style meetings in both Bristow and Sapulpa. I am looking forward to the opportunity to visit with you about issues of concern in your area, provide some insight about the everyday duties of the Attorney General's Office, and discuss steps we can take together to protect our Constitution.

Have a blessed week -
